CHAPTER LIV.

BURDENS OF THE LOWER CLASSES.

Previous to the enactment of the new code of laws on the subject of taxation, every man was required to pay a poll tax of one dollar annually.

At the present time, it is a dollar for one year and a half dollar for the next.

Formerly, the tax of a common size farn was,
1 Fathom Swine
40 Kapas
40 Pags
1 Dog
80 Fathoms of fish line, and a fish-net 800 meshes in length. This was the Government tax.

Now the whole of this taxation is abolished except the fathom Swine, and even that is reduced to half its former size every other year.

Formerly, besides this Government tax, there was another tax laid by the local Governors, another by the higher landlords, and another still by their subordinates.

At the present time there is no assessment except for the Government tax. No other tax can be laid.

Formerly, if the Landlord became dissatisfied, he at once dispossessed his tenant even without cause, and then gave his land to whomsoever asked for it.

At the present time that practice is at an end; lands are held by a strong tenure; they cannot be seized without cause.

Formerly, a prohibition rested even on the ocean, so that men must not take fish from it.

At the present the prohibition is removed, so that every man may take fish where he pleases with very few exceptions.

Formerly, there were distinct taxes on states, counties, towns and districts. Now there are no such taxes, they are strictly prohibited.

Formerly, if the King wished for the property of any man, he took it without reward; even seized it by force or took a portion only, just in action accordance with his choice, and no man could refuse him. The same was true of every chief and even the landlords treated their tenants thus:

At the present time such conduct is at all ended. No chief whatever has power sufficient to do it now. Should one attempt it, he would instantly cease to be a chief on this archipelago.

Formerly, if a man had a number of children, they were a very heavy burden on account of their increasing the amount of his taxation.
